CLAIM NEEDED MAJORITY

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—Senate sponsors of the Philippine Independence Bill today claimed the two-thirds majority needed to override President Hoover's veto will be available when the issue is brought to a vote, probably Monday, but their claims were disputed by opponents of the bill. In support of their claim they pointed to a top-heavy Senate majority supporting this bill on its initial passage and the vote of 274 to 94 by which the House disregarded the veto. Opponents of the bill predicted the Senate will uphold the President. In all quarters it was conceded the Senate vote probably will be close.

PLEDGES IMMUNITY

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—Acting Superintendent of Police Joseph LeStrange today pledged complete secrecy and immunity from publicity to any witnesses of the murder of Rose McCloskey in a secluded section of Fairmount Park last week.

Recovering from a brutal beating, Dennis Boyle, Rose's escort that night, told police another couple was seated on a park bench less than 100 yards from the scene of the slaying. "If that couple will get in touch with me I will arrange to talk with them secretly, and I pledge them I will keep their identity secret. The same goes for any other person who may have information valuable to us."

REYNOLDS BABY BORN NATURALLY

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.—The infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds, who can claim $13,000,000 of his father's patrimony if he survives, was born naturally, the doctor who brought him into the world told I. N. S. today.

Contradictory to reports that Mrs. Reynolds had been given treatment designed to bring on premature birth of the babe, Dr. Norris M. Vaux, obstetrician who attended the widow of Zachary Smith Reynolds, tobacco millionaire, said: "There was no induction or interference. The infant was born in a perfectly natural manner."

It had been rumored Libby, to whose highly nervous state Dr. Vaux himself attested when she was admitted to the Pennsylvania Hospital, gave birth to the baby by artificial means. At the time of her admittance it was said she was there for observation only.

JAPANESE THROWN BACK IN ADVANCE ON JEHO

Fierce Resistance Met at The Hands of The Chinese

MANY NEW SKIRMISHES

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14.—"Jap" troops marching on the capital of Jehol Province from Kailu were thrown back to-day by fierce Chinese resistance. Numerous new skirmishes occurred as both armies prepared for a conflict of major importance. Japanese military authorities claimed a final "clean up" of bandits in Northern Manchukuo with the surrender of General Pinz-Chao and the flight of another rebel leader. A group of Chinese communists calling themselves the "Provincial Government of the Soviet Republic in China" presented a manifesto to the nationalist government demanding immediate declaration of war against Japan. Meanwhile, Japanese delegates to the League of Nations and Sir Eric Drummond, retiring secretary of the League, were reported to have drawn up a plan for conciliating the Sino-Japanese dispute, to be submitted to the Far Eastern Committee of 19 on Monday.

PONDER MOORE'S FATE

Marshall, Ill., Jan. 14.—Twelve jurors today pondered the fate of Hubert C. Moore, 32, a former school teacher, who testified during his murder trial he killed his wife because he always found the sink full of dirty dishes. Judge C. E. Schuey gave the case to the jury after outlining seven possible verdicts. The State demands the death penalty for Moore.

BUTLER TO SPEAK

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 14.—Major General Smedley D. Butler, retired Marine Corps officer, and Paul Griffith, State Commander of the American Legion, will be the speakers in the Bucks county court house here on the night of February 15th at an American Legion rally sponsored by the Associated Legion posts of Bucks County.

ELECTION AND REMPFER MURDER IN NOVEMBER

Such Were Foremost News Items in Section During That Month of '32

ITEMS FROM THE FILES

The November elections and the murder of Frances Marie Rempfer loomed large in the news columns of the Courier during November of 1932. Many items culled from Couriers of that month follow:

NOVEMBER

1st—A new organization among Bucks County banks went into effect. The organization known as Bucks County Bankers' Association was effected to expedite collection of checks among the banks from three and four days to one day.

Pennsylvania state highway patrolmen guarded all ferries and bridges across the Delaware to prevent an invasion of "foreign" trucks, and as a result seven states started "hitting back" at the Keystone State. Trucks, licensed in other states were to be forced to purchase Pennsylvania license plates if they operated within this state for "profit."

4th—Lumberville Delaware Bridge Company announced it would dissolve on November 7th, after being organized for 80 years. Bridge has recently been acquired by Pennsylvania and New Jersey and freed to public traffic.

7th—T. W. McNally, 77, died suddenly at his home in Tacony. Deceased was a former Bristol resident.

Severe sentences were meted out in Doylestown to two youth who pleaded guilty to holding up the Argonne Inn and the place of William Snyder, Croydon. Wilmer Kaesterman and Stephen Bush, Philadelphia, were sentenced to several years in the Eastern State Penitentiary.

8th—Bristolians turned out in great numbers for November election. Henry W. Watson was re-elected to Congress from the new third district. Although Herbert Hoover lost the presidential incumbent received the vote in Bucks County.

Proposed bond issue of $58,000 for school purposes was defeated by a vote of 614 to 128 at election in Falls Township.

9th—American Legion Cadets of Robert W. Bracken Post, who the previous summer had secured the honors of being the best junior corps in Pennsylvania when they attended the state American Legion Convention, were honored with a testimonial banquet in St. James's parish house. The silver loving cup won at the Pittsburgh convention was presented at the close of the dinner.

10th—Statement was made from county school superintendent's office that speech clinics would be held throughout the county, 282 children in the county having speech defects of some type. Dr. Frank Hipps, president of Bryan King School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, had been secured to stage the clinics.

Bristol Branch of Needlework Guild of America surpassed its mark of the previous year when it displayed 5,379 garments. Mrs. Horace T. Greenwood, founder of Merion Branch, brought the message at the annual exhibit.

11th—R. W. Bracken Post, American Legion, held an Armistice meeting on the lawn of the Legion Home. Later in the day this group together with Cadets captured $125 in prize money at Doylestown when many posts vied for honors in a parade and other competitions.

12th—Bristol borough public school board served notice that the high (Continued on page 4)

FARMERS WILL ATTEND BIG COUNTY MEETING

Two Speakers of National Prominence at National Farm School

CO-OPERATIVE BUYING

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 14.—County Agent William F. Greenawalt is arranging with the farmers' clubs, Granges and co-operatives of Bucks County for a big meeting of interest to these groups, to occur at National Farm School, February 1st.

"Bucks County farmers will have an opportunity to hear two men of national prominence speak at this meeting on farm co-operation," states Mr. Greenawalt. The two are: H. E. Babcock, president of the Grange League Federation and assistant publisher of the "American Agriculturalist," New York; and John J. Dillon, editor of the "Rural New Yorker," Ithaca, N. Y. These men will discuss practical problems involved in co-operative marketing and buying by farmers.

The meeting is scheduled to start at 10 a. m., with Raymond Taylor, Newtown, as chairman. The discussion will continue in the afternoon.

The committee assisting with arrangements consists of: P. A. Waring, New Hope; Raymond Taylor, Newtown; Clarence H. Smith, Wycombe; and Ralph T. Crowell, Buckingham. Bucks county today leads Penna. in two fields of co-operative efforts. At Doylestown is located the largest co-operative egg auction market in the State and at Newtown, the Newtown Co-operative Association does the largest car-door buying business of any other farmers' co-operative in Penna.

"Eastern farmers," said Mr. Greenawalt, "are beginning to recognize the vital importance of banding together in order to meet competition from more distant producing centers. Modern transportation is changing their attitude. They are realizing that being close to the market is not sufficient advantage. In addition they must grade and market their produce in an orderly fashion."

Carrying of Tear Gas "Fountain Pens" is Illegal

Chief of Police Linford Jones calls the attention of a number of Bristol residents who are carrying fountain pens loaded with tear gas to a recent court decision, explained in the following message of Inspector Moore of the New York state police:

"The decision rendered by the appellate division supreme court 'First Department,' state of New York respondent Lloyd Anderson, appellant.

"A weapon resembling a fountain pen and capable of discharging cartridges constitutes a pistol, revolver or other firearm within the meaning of sub-division 4, section 1897, of the penal law.

"This settles a question as to whether or not a tear gas fountain pen is considered as a pistol, revolver or other firearm and whether or not a license is necessary to possess, carry concealed such a weapon.

"In view of the decision in the above case a fountain pen designed primarily for the discharge of tear gas in a pistol within the meaning of section 1897, sub-division 4, of the penal law, and a license to possess or carry same is required."

Edward Jarvis of the Coast Guard Service, Asbury Park, spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. Maurice L. Carter, Swain street. Miss Ruth Jones, who has been the guest at the Carter home, returned to Frederick, Md.

ATTEMPTS TO END LIFE; IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Mrs. William Cady, Sr., Yardley, Had Been Despondent For Some Time

USE OXYGEN TANK

YARDLEY, Jan. 14.—Mrs. William Cady, Sr., River Mawr, who endeavored to take her life by gas yesterday morning, is in a critical condition at her home.

Mrs. Cady arose as usual, and according to statements from her husband was more cheerful than she had been for some months past. She did the morning wash for her infant son, Benjamin, seven months old, hanging it on the line to dry. Benjamin was later placed in his coach on the front porch for his daily nap.

Her children, Helen, 8, and William, Jr., 6, students in Yardley school, upon returning home for lunch at 12:15, were unable to gain entrance to their home. Thinking perhaps their mother was at a neighbor's, Mrs. Charles Davis, Sr., they called at the Davis home. Jesse, the 27-year-old son, returned to the Cady bungalow with the two children, and being unable to open either door, climbed up the chimney, to look in the kitchen window. It was then that he detected gas. His mother, Mrs. Davis, took the two children to the home of Mrs. Harry Morris, four doors away, where they are still in ignorance of their mother's condition.

Young Davis then removed the front screen door from the hinges, and found the front door unlocked, but blocked shut by a large chair from an overstuffed living room suite, shoving this aside, he made his way through the gas-filled house to the kitchen, where he found Mrs. Cady with her head in the oven of the gas stove, with the door closed on her neck, and the open portion of the door covered over by a rubber apron to prevent the fumes from escaping so rapidly into the room. Her body was against the back door, and her face wore a ghastly expression. Discovering that she was still breathing, Davis picked up the body and rushed with it to the rear yard, where he left the stricken woman in charge of his mother and sister, Miss Grace Davis, a trained nurse, and summoned Dr. R. J. Horwell, who was soon at the Cady home.

DR. HOWARD PURSELL DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS RESIDENCE

Deceased Was Engaged in Business Here for 58 Years

CAME HERE IN 1869

Took Active Part in Civic, Church and Lodge Affairs

Dr. Howard Pursell died very suddenly last night in the bath room of his residence, 256 Radcliffe street. The deceased was one of the best known residents in this community.

Dr. Pursell was stricken and summoned his daughter who in turn called a physician. Death occurred within a very short time.

The deceased is survived by his wife, son and daughter.

Dr. Howard Pursell was born in Bridgeton Township, Bucks County, March 3, 1847. He attended the public schools there and in Milford, N. J., until he was 16 years of age.

In 1863 Dr. Pursell went to Philadelphia to clerk in a wholesale drug house and to learn the drug business. During the winters of 1864 and 1865 while employed with Elliott, White & Co., he attended the University of Pennsylvania.

During the Civil War Dr. Pursell went out with the Second Union League Regiment from Philadelphia but got only as far as Harrisburg, which he reached the day after the battle of Gettysburg and was never sworn in for military duty.

In 1865 Dr. Pursell went to New York City and entered a drug store where he remained until the fall of 1866 and attended the University of the City of New York from which he graduated in 1867, as a physician and surgeon. He was then only 20 years of age.

Upon completion of his education as a physician and surgeon Dr. Pursell went to McKean County and practiced for two years and then he came to Bristol and opened a drug store and physician's office at Mill and Cedar streets, where he continued the practice of medicine for 58 consecutive years.

Dr. Pursell was elected president of the Bristol Board of Health upon its organization in 1893 and he served as such for a period of 20 years. He was treasurer of the Bristol Presbyterian Church for many years, director and treasurer of Merchants & Mechanics Building & Loan Association, since 1885, director of Bristol Cemetery Co., since its organization in 1882, and for many years its secretary; member of Bristol Lodge, No. 25, F. & A. M., since 1871, and also a past master; member of America Howe, Hook & Ladder Co., No. 2; member of Bristol Lodge, No. 970, B. P. O. Elks; and an ex-president of the Bucks County Medical Society. He was also affiliated with the Philadelphia Medical Society, and Bristol Exchange Club.

Dr. Pursell was interested in the formation of the Bristol Gas Light Company, which was the first gas company formed here, and was a director for 20 years.

The deceased travelled extensively, having visited practically every State in the Union, and Canada and Cuba, included.

The Rev. S. Brooks Knowlton, pastor of Bristol Presbyterian Church, will officiate at the funeral service at the Pursell home on Tuesday at two p. m. Burial in Bristol Cemetery will be under direction of the H. S. Rus Estate, undertakers.

Professor Ramin Praised On First Recital in U. S.

EASTON, Pa., Jan. 14.—(INS)—Professor Gunther Ramin, noted German organist, today was receiving praise for his first American recital before students, faculty members and prominent local citizens in the chapel on the campus of Lafayette College yesterday morning.

The noted German organist and composer held his audience enthralled with a recital in four parts. He played selections from the works of Johann Sebastian Bach, Max Reger and "old masters." He also played for the first time in this country two of his own compositions.

Professor Ramin arrived in New York Thursday.

Heart Attack Fatal To Wm. Fortune, Parkland

LANGHORNE, Jan. 14.—A retired farmer, William Fortune, died of a heart attack in front of the residence of Senator Clarence J. Buckman, yesterday morning, while in the company of his wife and a friend.

Highway Patrolman Berger was called as well as a physician; and neighbors likewise assisted. The physician pronounced Fortune dead when he arrived at the scene. Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young was called, and the body was moved to a morgue.

It was stated by Mrs. Lavinia Fortune, wife of the deceased, that her husband had been complaining during the past few weeks of pains in his chest. The couple lived in Upper Parkland.

NOW ONE IN SIX

Thirty years ago less than three per cent of American youth of college age was securing higher education. Today one in every six is enrolled in college, university or professional school. Small wonder that many are asking whether the nation is not being overstocked with educated men and women.

No nation has ever suffered from an overdose of education, and the United States is now in no danger of over-education. The unemployed are not college men and women, nor are the recent graduates poured into the professional ranks starving or becoming public dependents.

Hundreds of thousands of graduates have been turned out by the institutions of higher learning since the war, yet with those large numbers only one in 40 adults is a college graduate and one in 20 of the remainder has had some college training.

This is the day of the educated person and the supply has not yet exceeded the demand. Helping to make possible the absorption in business and industry of the educated hordes is the displacement of labor by machinery. Mechanization of industry increases the demand for brains as it decreases the demand for brawn.

The truly educated man will find a place for himself. The uneducated untrained must have a place created for them. Which suggests that there is a reciprocal relationship between education and modern business which has worked to the mutual benefit of business and the educated man and woman each making the other possible.

FORM THE THINK HABIT

Fear of making mistakes has made failures of as many men as mistakes have made successes. Failures are awed into retrogression by the same possibilities-of-mistakes challenged by the successes among men.

A popular adage is: "The man who never made a mistake never made a dollar," but a truer statement of fact might be: "The man who never made a mistake has not yet lived."

Conceding that all men make mistakes, it is manifest that only the same mistakes repeated is unpardonable and the habit, not the individual mistake, is costly. Somebody pays every time somebody blunders and the only way to correct the habit of blundering is to form the habit of doing things right. Form the habit of being careful and take pains today that you may spare yourself incalculable pain tomorrow. Many are blundering on to success by making the most of their blunders.

The haunting regret in every mistake is the thought that it could have been averted with a little thought. The indolent find actions easier than thought and much of humanity is indolent.

Thinking can be made a habit just as most bodily movements are from force of habit. Cultivate the habit of thinking before acting and that bugaboo, the mistake-habit, will decamp for more salubrious foraging.

An intellectual is one who can quote the good authors who furnished the few ideas he possesses.

Highlights in the Life of Calvin Coolidge

Calvin Coolidge was nominated on the first ballot at the Cleveland convention, June, 1924, without any organized opposition having developed, and went to the country on his record of economy in government. Opposed in the campaign by John W. Davis, as the Democratic nominee, and Senator La Follette, running as an independent, the President remained in Washington, making few speeches, and left the active campaigning to his running mate, Charles G. Dawes. The November election swept Coolidge back into office, the popular vote for the ticket exceeding 15,000,000—almost twice the vote polled by the Democrats. In his inaugural address at the capital on March 4, 1925, the President pledged himself to continue his efforts for economy in government, to lessen tax burdens and to promote peace and mutual understanding among the nations of the world.

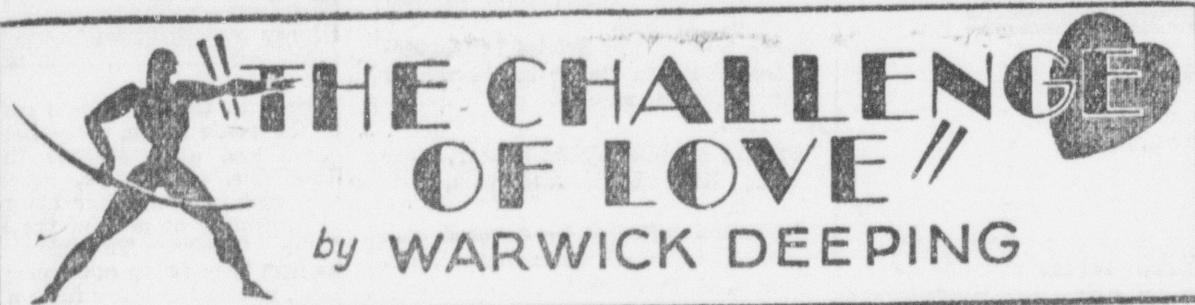

SWORN AS PRESIDENT 1925

The beginning of President Coolidge's first elective term saw the start of the greatest era of prosperity in the history of America. Throughout his term in office prosperity mounted to ever higher peaks. This resulted, naturally, in a wave of sentiment in high business circles in favor of his re-nomination, notwithstanding the traditional "third term" bogey. Coolidge allowed speculation as to his intentions concerning another term to run unchecked. Neither by word or deed did he give any clue to his political intentions. Other potential candidates were kept in a fever of uncertainty. "Will he, or won't he run?" became a national question. Coolidge stuck to his job of running the nation, taking a few days off, now and then, to indulge in his favorite hobby—fishing. Coolidge had the inflexible patience of the true angler, which, incidentally, helped him weather many a trying crisis.

In the Summer of 1927, President Coolidge went to the Black Hills of South Dakota for a vacation, leaving the country still guessing as to whether or not he would seek another term in office. The familiar Coolidge face looked out from the pages of every newspaper in the country, in various guises—as an angler, as an Indian chief and as a rough-riding cowboy, complete with ten-gallon hat and jaunty chaps while editorial writers became almost hysterical in their speculations as to the intentions of the Green Mountain Sphinx. Then one day, exactly four years after he assumed the Presidency, Coolidge gave out his enigmatic statement "I do not choose to run in 1928." The words were characteristic of the man and in line with his doctrine of brevity, but they only started a fresh wave of speculation. "Does he mean it?" was now the cry.

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

The same evening Burgess appeared in his Sunday clothes at Josiah Crabbe's. The man was frightened. A sense of insecurity had chilled his ardour. Crabbe was amused.

"There's that cottage of mine waiting for you."

"I'm fearing, sir, I mayn't get the work as I did down yonder."

"That's it, Burgess, that's it. Twopenny halfpenny for the rights of man! We lie snug in our pockets, and let liberty lie in the gutter! Don't you worry, my man, don't you worry."

"Right's right, Mr. Crabbe, but when a man's got a family—"

"You won't be worse off up here, Burgess. Don't be a fool, and don't whine. I don't like whining."

Cobbler Burgess's cottage in George Lane had another tenant, and this appeared to be the sole result that could be attributed to the protest he had lodged with the Navestock Board of Guardians. No one seemed interested in the matter, and whatever Dr. Threadgold may have thought of Turrell's cottage property and the state of the stable yard adjoining George Lane, the cynical persistence of the old conditions suggested either that Threadgold had thought it best to have no opinions, or that he had had no success in stating them. Someone had thrown a stone into a stagnant pond, and the ripples appeared to have died down. Josiah Crabbe, the man of property, knew otherwise. Men whose interests have been threatened are very sensitive. Even an abortive attack leaves them uneasy. They do not forget.

He had to hold Editor Boxall back by the collar.

"Wait a few weeks, and we'll give them another dig, just when they are beginning to settle down comfortably. In birching a boy, Boxall, you shouldn't lay it on too fast. Give him time to think between the strokes, and to wonder when the next is coming. That was just a rap to begin with."

It was late October, and the yellow leaves were falling from the Lombardy poplars on the road near Josiah Crabbe's house. At Eve's Corner, Mrs. Sarah Loosely went to and fro in Wolfe's sitting-room, a busy primness on her mouth. Visitors were to be there to tea, and the lace doilies on the dishes took an immense amount of delicate attention. It had been said that Heaven would have to be the perfection of tidiness, or Mrs. Loosely would not consent to remain there. Palm branches were to be sloped like muskets on parade, halos tilted at precisely the same angle.

Wolfe was busy in the coach-house, diving into the depths of a monster hamper. Yellow straw and wisps of paper lay piled about, and files of bottles, green and blue, stood crowded like a mob along one wall. He was unpacking drugs that had arrived that morning from a firm of manufacturing chemists whom Josiah Crabbe had recommended.

His brown hands were groping in the bottom of the hamper when the door-bell rang. The clinking together of two bottles at the same moment masked the sound for him. There were greetings under the white Georgian porch between Mrs. Loosely and two visitors.

"Well, Sarah, it is a long while since I saw you. You don't look a day older."

"I don't feel it."

"Here's Jess, getting long in the legs."

Mrs. Loosely pecked at Jess's cheek.

"You are getting quite grown up, my dear!"

"You are a nice man to ask visitors to tea!" Jess chided.

Jess laughed. Mrs. Loosely put it as though growth was a new and amazing phenomenon.

"Mayn't I grow? I'm seventeen."

"You ought to have your hair up."

"Oh—bother!"

"Mr. Wolfe's not expecting you till four."

"We came in early Sarah, and I shopped quicker than I thought I should."

"He's head over ears in a hamper in the coach-house. Never knew such a gentleman to do things for himself. And as considerate as a curate."

Jess mouthed her scorn. "Curate! Let's go and catch him at it. Mother, I'll leave the basket here in the hall."

So Wolfe was caught still groping in the hamper, his back towards the house, and the late October sunlight streaming in upon the yellow straw.

"You are a nice man to ask visitors to tea!"

He found the glowing, mischievous face of the girl setting off the maturer amusement of the mother. "Hallo! I didn't expect you yet."

"I'm going in to have a chat with Mrs. Loosely, John."

"What a mess you are making!"

"Mess! Nothing could be more orderly. Look at those bottles."

This was Jess's first visit, and she had to be shown all that Wolfe had to show. She was a partisan from head to heel, taking things passionately to heart. Wolfe may not have seen the girl's pride in all that concerned him, but her mother saw it, and smiled with her wise blue eyes. Jess was ready to turn Mrs. Loosely's house upside down in her enthusiasm, even to oust the good lady, and see Wolfe in full possession.

The door bell interrupted tea and there were voices in the hall. Someone was shown into the room on the other side of the passage. Mrs. Loosely appeared with an air of importance.

"Mr. Flemming wants to see you, sir."

"What, the rector?"

"Yes."

Jess flushed up sensitively.

"There! Isn't that just splendid! You must go, John. Don't let us be in the way. We can look after each other."

Wolfe found Robert Flemming standing with his back to the big gilt-framed mirror that hung over the mantelpiece in Mrs. Loosely's parlour. Flemming, like Wolfe, looked too big for this little brick-and-brac world, a human-headed Assyrian bull stranded in some curio shop with his head six inches from the ceiling.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Wolfe. I have come to call on you in your new quarters."

"Please sit down, Mr. Flemming."

The rector looked for a chair, but some vague prejudice kept him standing. An attitude of mind that approached the apologetic was absolutely new to him. It was like preaching in a strange language. "You find yourself comfortable here?"

"Very."

Flemming himself was big with discomfort.

"I may as well tell you at once, Mr. Wolfe, why I have come to call on you. The fact is, I have been thinking over that conversation we had some time ago. I don't know that I am altogether easy in my mind."

Wolfe's heart went out suddenly to the older man. There was a labelling of the heavy wheels of Flemming's mind. His handsome face had an expression of doubt, and of distress.

"Won't you sit down?"

"I can talk better standing."

"You are referring to the talk we had on the health of the town?"

"Yes."

Wolfe leant one shoulder against the window casing. Flemming was like a man trying to walk in deep mud, and Wolfe felt a desire to stretch out a hand to him.

"I shall only be too glad to give you any information. But as things stand—"

Flemming's eyes turned to him expectantly.

"Ah, that's where I feel my difficulty. My impression is that there is an aggressive and bellicose spirit at work in the town."

Wolfe's mouth grew sterner.

"I think I told you, sir, that there are times when a man must fight."

"Then, you allow—"

"I allow that I am against all compromise, and that there is a certain public spirit growing here that means to force reform."

"A few Radicals, eh?"

"I don't think you ought to put it that way. Besides, such a taunt cuts back."

"You are right; I withdraw. But are you determined to be bitter? I say bitter—because—well, it's human nature."

"It is not bitterness with me, but I can assure you it is war, if that is what you wish to know."

BRISTOL HIGH FIVE IS ADVANCING IN LEAGUE

(By Oscar Corn)

Advancing in the Lower Bucks County League, the Bristol high fives defeated the fast Southampton five, 31 to 19, last night. It was a fast played game and kept the spectators cheering throughout. This was the first league game played here, and a large crowd attended. The fighting spirit of both teams and the last quarter rally of Southampton are to be commented upon.

The Bristol High five's defense worked very good, but they were a little unsteady on the offense. Southampton could make little progress against either the first or second Bristol teams. Never, during the game, did they get the lead. The Strangers took the lead in the opening minutes of the game and held it.

Cole, stellar guard, was high point-gatherer for the stragglers with a quintet of double-deckers and a foul. H. Verkes was high scorer for Southampton with six points.

In a game which was as fast and exciting as a girls' game can be, the Bristol High sextet defeated the snappy Southampton lassies, 17 to 10.

The game started with a bang. Bristol managed to pile up seven points before the visiting sextet could score. Slowly but surely the Cardinal and Gray score increased until Southampton discovered Bristol would not be undaunted.

The entire teamwork of the local team greatly improved. The passing was good, and the plays worked fairly smooth. After losing two games, the team came back strong, and now they have the prospects of coming out on top in their league. This was their first league game.

Nills was high scorer for Bristol, with four twin-pointers and a duet of fouls. Severns scored most for Southampton, getting six points.

BURKE IN SOLITUDE

Lancaster, Jan. 14.—Charles Burke, 27, Philadelphia, one of three men held in the Lancaster County prison in connection with the Mountville National Bank hold-up, was kept in solitary confinement today after discovery by prison guards of a plot to free inmates of the jail. Prison guards said Burke and his two associates, Karl Kehrer and William Schaffner, 26, made several attempts to get in touch with "outside" friends. Improvised ropes of bed clothing were found, prison officials said.

ADMINISTRATION EXPENSES
HIGH

Harrisburg, Jan. 14.—Requisition clearings today through the state treasury showed the administration expenses of the State Emergency Relief Board are running in excess of $60,000 a year while the cost of several counties for clerical work is fast approaching a cost of $1,000,000 a year.

The State Board in the last three months had approved expenditures of more than $200,000 for administrative work of county relief boards. Of that total, $141,000 was for the payment of wages in the Philadelphia Relief Board where charity workers were the first to insist the state pay all expenses.

TO PRESENT JUDD PETITION

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 14.—Winnie Ruth Judd's fine petition for commutation of the death sentence was scheduled to be presented formally to the State Pardon Board today. Mrs. Judd signed the petition at the state prison in Florence where she is under sentence to be hanged February 17 for the murder of Agnes Ann Lerol, her companion. Mrs. Judd again denied she was the instigator of a quarrel which resulted in the shooting.

Major Hostilities Planned
For Over Jehol Province

TOKYO, Jan. 14.—(INS)—War clouds thickened in the Far East today as China and Japan prepared for major hostilities over the disputed Jehol Province.

Concentration of Chinese troops to prevent annexation of Jehol to Manchukuo made the situation extremely grave. Reports from Shanghai that Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang will raise a $12,000,000 loan to defray expenses of war heightened the tension.

Japanese newspapers said strong Chinese forces were concentrating at strategic points for the defense of Jehol Province, which the Chinese have stated they will defend at any cost.

Attempts To End Life;
In Critical Condition

Later an oxygen tank was rushed to the scene by the Mercer Hospital, and after working for three hours with Mrs. Cady in the yard of her home they were able to revive her sufficiently to move her into the house. She was in an exhausted condition and was unable to mumble "I'm cold!" No statement can be secured as to her reason for the suicide attempt.

Her husband was summoned and arrived before one o'clock, from his business with the firm, J. B. Richardson & Son, Trenton.

Mrs. Cady has been in a despondent frame of mind for some months, and remarked Thursday evening when calling on neighbors that she regretted the fact that she could not give her children the advantages which some of the neighboring children were enjoying. Nothing queer was detected at the end of the evening, and she borrowed two jig-saw puzzles to take home with her to help her pass her spare time while the older children were at school.

Mrs. Cady has a mother, Mrs. Benjamin Stevens, in Philadelphia, and a sister, who is a nurse in Girard College.

Diamond Trading

By BURNLEY

THERE is always a certain amount of pathos attached to the passing of an old diamond favorite from a team with which he has spent almost his entire baseball career. The recent spurge of trading which featured the big league meetings last month resulted in the shifting to new surroundings of several well-known stars, who had long been identified with their particular teams.

"Sunny Jim" Bottomley has guarded the initial bag for the St. Louis Cardinals for so many years that the Cards won't seem like the same team, now that Jeems has been traded down the river to the Rhineland to swing his hickory mace for Sid Weil's Reds.

Branch Rickey, the master mind of the St. Louis team, has been grooming Jim Collins for Bottomley's first base position for some time past, and it was inevitable that the genial veteran would be sold or traded before another season rolled around.

Bottomley will find at least one old familiar face among his new team-mates, as Chick Hafey, the present slugging ace of the Reds, was for years Jim's sidekick on the Cardinals. Hafey and Bottomley are great pals, and together they helped drive the St. Louis team to three pennants in past seasons.

The acquisition of a hard-hitting veteran like Bottomley should strengthen the Reds, as they gave up little in return for James in the deal with the Cardinals.

Cincinnati fans are said to be happier over the acquisition of Sunny Jim than at any time since the late Christy Mathewson was shipped to the Reds by John McGraw, years and years ago. Bottomley's personality should be a help to the gate, and his hitting ability will make up for the loss of Babe Herman.

Another well-known veteran who will be seen in a new uniform this spring is Fred "Firpo" Marberry, the huge hurler who has been a familiar figure with the Washington Senators for nearly a decade, and who was traded last month to Detroit even up for Earl Whitehill. Like Bottomley, Marberry will find an old friend among his new teammates this coming season, for the manager of the Detroit outfit is none other than "Bucky" Harris, who was "Firpo's" old boss at Washington before Walter Johnson took the reins there.

Marberry always liked Harris, and he promises to throw his arm out for "Bucky" this season. Harris handled "Firpo" with consummate skill in the days when he was piloting the Senators to a pennant, and the erstwhile boy leader thinks that the burly moundman is still one of the best in the league.

The big Texan didn't get along so well with Walter Johnson at Washington last year, and had a rather poor season, being confined to his old specialty of relief hurling after he had gotten off to a poor start in his regular mound work. Late in the 1932 season, however, Marberry began to come through in grand style, and this convinced Harris that Marberry will prove a very valuable addition to the Tigers' hurling corps during the coming campaign.
